MOKENA TO INCREASE WATER RATES

Special Tax On Business Houses Passed Up By Board

The matter of raising additional revenue for the village of Mokena was the main subject under discussion at the council meeting Tuesday night.

The license committee presented two plans for the board to consider. The first plan called for a flat special tax of $10 per year for each and every place of business in the village. The second plan was to raise the water rates and thus spread the tax over the entire village instead of taking only one group.

The board after considering the two plans found that if the special tax on business places were adopted, only $220 per year could be raised but by raising the water rate, $450 per year could be raised. The latter plan was favored. The present water rate is 27 cents per thousand gallons for the first 26,000 gallons, and the new proposed increase will be 39 cents per the first 26,000 gallons, 31 cents per 1000 gallons for the next 20,000 gallons, and 24 cents per 1000 gallons for water used in excess of 46,000 gallons.

The present minimum rate is $1.75 every three months. The new rate will be $2.50 for each quarter.

In addition to the added revenue to be derived from the increased water rates, the tavern licenses are to be raised from the present rate of $100 per year to $200 per year.

The vehicle tax collection also came in for consideration. The board proposed that all vehicle tax remain at $3.00 per year if paid within 90 days from January first. All tax paid after the 90 day period will draw a $5 per year rate, thus the auto owner will save himself $2 by paying the vehicle tax on time.

The new license rates will be passed at the February meeting which will be held the first Tuesday night in February. All new license increases will go into effect April first. Tavern licenses will be payable in six month periods, same as they have been.

The increase in water rates and tavern licenses will bring in a new added revenue of $650 per year.

In order to protect the local merchants, the board is also considering raising the present peddler license fee of $15 per year to $25.

Mokena Scarlet Fever Cases Are Steadily Improving

Dr. E. G. MacMahon reported to the Mokena village board Tuesday night on the scarlet fever epidemic which has been sweeping Mokena. He reported that most of the cases have cleared up nicely and that at present there are only about six cases under quarantine. Dr. MacMahon pointed out that there has been much misunderstanding regarding the epidemic and that a representative from the State Board of Health has been here and found that the quarantine regulations have been carried out according to law.

Report was made that one family under quarantine has been found violating the quarantine rules and they were told if they persist in so doing they will be subject to a six months jail sentence and a $200 fine.

SEVEN TINLEY PARK STUDENTS INJURED WHEN TRUCK HITS SEDAN

Seven Tinley Park students attending the Thornton Township high school in Harvey were injured, three of them seriously, when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a trailer truck at Crawford avenue and Brennan highway, Monday morning about 8 o'clock.

All of the victims were taken to the Ingalls Memorial hospital in Harvey, where four were released after first aid treatment.

The injured were: Edw. Nugent, 16 years old, possible skull fracture; Vernon Brandau, 14, fracture of hip and Jack Ryan, 14, bruises. The driver of the car Paul Schultdt, 17, of 17137 Oak Park avenue, Tinley Park suffered injuries to the knees. The other students were Otto Becker, 16

Shirley Anderson, 17, and her brother Eugene 16.

All of the students returned home with the exception of Nugent and Brandau who are still confined to the hospital. Paul Schultdt returned home but is confined to bed.

Schultdt told the sheriff's police that he was driving east in Brennan highway and had stopped before crossing Crawford avenue. As he started across his sedan was hit by a truck driven by Herbert Johnson, 41, of East St. Louis.

The truck which was carrying a load of empty bottles into Chicago, knocked the sedan to the east side of the intersection. The truck was turned over. The sheriff's police held Johnson for questioning.

SYNOPSIS

Joyce Sewell, on the eve of her twentieth birthday, rebels at her lot, dependent on her detested stepmother, Irma, and full of tragic memories of her mother's murder twelve years before and her father's death six months ago. Irma calls in Helm Blackadder, an admirer, to persuade Joyce to marry rich, young Michael Kirkpatrick. Mike, sent up to Joyce by Irma and Blackadder, demands a showdown on his proposal and is rejected. Joyce realizes that La Barranca, a Mexican hacienda which her father had owned, legally belongs to her. She receives a warrant on the United States Treasury for $10,000 compensation for her mother's murder at La Barranca. She confers with Mr. Bradley, a banker and only remaining friend of her father's. She confides that she wants to make a secret journey to Mexico. Bradley arranges all details for her. She departs by plane undetected. Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of the American embassy in Mexico City, gives Joyce a chilly reception and she loses her temper. She finds a Mexican woman lawyer, Margarita Fonseca, who takes her to General Onelia, right-hand man to the Mexican minister of war. Margarita reminds Onelia that the usurper of La Barranca is his dangerous enemy, General Dorado. The two make plans to send Joyce with a few picked men under Pancho Buenaventura to drive Dorado out. Adan Arnaldo, a young man who runs El Tenebroso, a night club, knows Dorado's present whereabouts, so they take Joyce there that night, where she notices Dirk. General Dorado arrives and in the course of sudden gunplay, the lights go out and Joyce is left alone. Adan Arnaldo whisks her out and takes her home. The following morning Joyce drives off to Toluca with Pancho. Back in Elsinboro, Joyce's disappearance has been discovered. Blackadder upbraids Irma, but succumbs to her helpless charm and plans to marry her. Blackadder gets the secretary of state to wire the embassy at Mexico City to locate Joyce. Dirk is delegated for the search. He goes to El Tenebroso and interviews Arnaldo. Arnaldo bids Dirk follow him. Meanwhile Joyce and Pancho reach La Barranca. Pancho and Eusebio, one of his band, leave her and at dawn climb the wall. Suddenly shots ring out and at sight of a sorely wounded man, Joyce runs inside and finds the dread Dorado there, tormented by Pancho and Eusebio. Dorado escapes. Running out again, Joyce is caught by a murderous hand and cries out, "Luz!" Dirk and Arnaldo go to Margarita's apartment, where they are told Joyce's destination and Dirk makes ready to follow alone. Meanwhile at La Barranca, Joyce's cry brings Luz and the other old servants of her childhood, led by Don Jorge Maximilian, now blind.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

"Then the thing becomes simple," said Don Jorge slowly. "I don't mean I can fathom the thought back of Onelia's action, but at least I know where we stand—you and I and all our people. You're here, Luz?"

"Si, Senor."

"Call Leonardo."

"What are you going to do?" asked Joyce as Luz slipped from the room.

"I'll tell you, chica," said Don Jorge, sitting very straight with his hands clasped over the head of his staff. "I'm told five or six of Dorado's followers lie dead. Owing to the suddenness of the attack no doubt his private arsenal is still intact. That gives us plenty of rifles and ammunition, and all the rest becomes easy."

Leonardo entered the room. "Senor, al-servicio-deusted."

"We stand a siege, Leonardo," said Don Jorge, "certainly for weeks, perhaps for months. Call in all our people, corral the stock, close the gates and man the towers with your best shots. You will find the necessary rifles and ammunition where they lie. At present the moon is at the full. Shoot anybody who comes within range by night or by day whether it's friend or foe."

"Oh, Maxie," interrupted Joyce, "why?"

"Since we ourselves are our only friends," said Don Jorge, "whoever comes from without must be a foe."

CHAPTER VIII

Years of peace and months of inaction had caused routine to lay its grip on the American embassy. Routine decreed that the second secretary's waking duty was to epitomize the local papers and lay before his chief by ten o'clock all such items as were worthy of his attention. But fate ordained that on this morning at the said hour Dirk van Suttart should be contemplating with astonishment one bullet hole through his radiator, still another through a front tire and a third that had shattered his non-shatterable windshield, fortunately on the side away from the driver.

Coincidentally the embassy butler murmured in the ambassadorial ear: "The minister of war on the telephone, sir—the minister in person."

Ten minutes later the ambassador was being shown into the most private room of the very private residence of the minister of war. It was strictly an unofficial visit—so unofficial that the minister had done the necessary telephoning without bothering to mention the matter to his secretary. Furthermore the invitation was for desayuno, a meal without food, certainly the last word in informality.

"Excellency, how can I express my gratitude that you should condescend to come to my humble abode for a mere sip of coffee?"

"Mr. Minister, I am delighted to be here. I've already had my coffee but I'll gladly accept another cup."

"Permit me to help you to it myself since our privacy is such that no servant is in attendance."

The ambassador, though a diplomat of the first water, felt enough time had been wasted on preliminaries. "I take note of the privacy, Mr. Minister, and see no reason why you should postpone telling me what is troubling you."

The minister's eyebrows went up. "It doesn't trouble you also, Excellency?"

"I must know what we're talking about," said the ambassador, startled. "Forgive me, Mr. Minister, but it happens I haven't done my usual reading of the news this morning."

"Ah!" said the minister and pushed forward a newspaper, folded and marked.

"Raid at La Barranca," he read. "We give space to an extraordinary rumor from our correspondent in Toluca not by reason of its fantastic interest but because should it prove true it may develop into an event of colossal import. Some years ago General Dorado, whose services to the republic require no epitome, took possession of the abandoned hacienda of La Barranca and has been doing his best not only to restore it to usefulness but to put into effect the fundamentals of agrarianism on which the future happiness of our people depends. Now word has come to us from a reliable source that a certain Joyce Sewell, said to be the daughter of the decamping former owner of La Barranca, suddenly appeared on the scene accompanied by 18 of her fellow countrymen, popularly known as gringos. Disguised to look like our own campesinos, by artifice these men introduced themselves into the innermost recesses of the hacienda. Opening fire without warning they are reported to have massacred the few Doradistas on guard and driven the general himself into the nearby hills. That he should have escaped is only one more proof of the astuteness and bravery with which—

Her Attention Was Riveted on Something Else.

The ambassador read no more. "A bad business," he murmured. "I can see various complications."

"They are innumerable," said the minister in a tone of exasperation. "No sooner do I estimate them from one angle than another slant presents an entire new crop. I doubt whether you can mention any aspect we should consider before all others."

"I certainly can," said the ambassador promptly. "The matter of the 18 Americans supposed to have accompanied the girl. I don't believe it. I don't believe there was even one American with her."

The minister threw out his hands and let them fall in a despairing gesture. "Excellency, please! It is of no consequence whatever whether they were Americans or not. Personally—strictly as between friends—I'm inclined to agree with you. But the public has been led to believe there were Americans—18 of them—and as long as it continues in that conviction it's exactly as if there had been."

"I admit it," said the ambassador grimly. "Nevertheless I intend sending a declaration to the papers that no American accompanied Miss Joyce Sewell. Her disappearance has been causing considerable commotion not only in my country but throughout the English-speaking world. It was thought she was penniless, consequently her parents were mystified as well as worried."

"Her parents? Are you speaking in the Spanish or the English sense of the word?"

"The English. She has a stepmother and a prospective stepfather who is expected to arrive here today."

"Ah," breathed the minister. "one more aspect, but perhaps encouraging. What is his mission?"

"I'm not sure but I gather he is determined to take the girl home at once."

"Good. If she still lives we must help him by every means in our power."

"Mr. Minister," said the ambassador gravely, "I wish to assure you that if disaster overtakes Miss Sewell it will shake the present pleasant relations between our two countries to their very foundations. Don't misunderstand me. I'm not implying that Miss Sewell's life is of greater importance than that of any other American living abroad. I'm merely taking into account that for the last ten days every man, woman and child in the United States has been reading about her and in my country such a flood of publicity automatically transforms her into a colossal bomb."

"At last!" murmured the minister, sinking back in his chair. "Now we can talk."

"In my opinion she should be rescued at once."

"An excellent idea—but how?"

"By sending a government force."

"To do what?"

"Bring her back to Mexico City, hand her over to her stepfather and bid them both farewell and good-riddance."

"Excellency, have you ever visited any of our major haciendas—especially La Barranca?"

"No; my duties—" began the ambassador vaguely.

"Of course," interrupted the minister. "La Barranca happens to be a fortress more easily defended than any castle existing in Scotland today. At this season it has stored within its walls enough provisions to keep a small army for five years to say nothing of unlimited water. With six high-powered rifles and plenty of ammunition I would guarantee to hold it indefinitely against a force of a hundred regulars. The only answer to La Barranca on its guard is artillery. Now let's see what your dream amounts to. You suggest that the Mexican government send a battalion against a young girl in whom your whole people happens to be particularly interested in order to kick her off her own property!"

"I withdraw the suggestion," said the ambassador gloomily. "I admit I spoke too hastily, but the possibility of resistance had not occurred to me. The whole thing is fantastic. Are you convinced all this has really happened? Remember the papers speak of it as a rumor."

"I happen to know it isn't a rumor at all," said the minister promptly. "My source of information is unimpeachable. There are certain elements of mystery which threaten my official neck, but the facts themselves are unalterable. The story is so true I regret I happen to be minister of war at the present juncture."

"Strange," murmured the ambassador with a wan smile. "I was thinking the same thing about my ambassadorship! What is your plan, Mr. Minister? I listen."

"Subterfuge and cash. I have no illusions about the senorita Joyce Sewell. I consider her as a fortress. The question now arises how shall she be taken? The answer is so simple it's classic. By an emissary bearing gifts, preferably a sack of gold. We'll find the gold, you find the emissary."

"I have it," exclaimed the ambassador. "My second secretary of the embassy."

The ambassador reached for the telephone, called his own chancellor and a moment later was asking the counselor of embassy what explanation Van Suttart had given for his late arrival.

"None, sir. He hasn't arrived."

"What?" cried the ambassador.

"Telephone him at once. Send around to his house. Tell him—"

Interrupted in the midst of his instructions he leaned forward, gripping the apparatus tighter and tighter. When the murmuring voice at the other end finally ceased he hung up and turned to face the minister.

"I regret the young gentleman I had in mind is not available since we don't know what has become of him."

"No clue?" asked the minister, frowning.

"Unfortunately there is," said the ambassador, "and I'm ashamed to be obliged to mention it. He was last seen at about two in the morning in the most questionable night club in town seated alone before a magnum of champagne. Needless to say, my first action upon returning to the embassy will be to recommend his immediate dismissal from the service."

The minister, who had knotted his fingers together, began to crack his knuckles one by one. "Be patient, Excellency."

"There's still this Blackadder fellow," the ambassador muttered hopelessly.

The minister was thinking of certain matters he had not voiced. Somebody was out to get him—perhaps had already got him! A phrase used casually by the ambassador hovered in his thoughts. What was the most questionable night club in town? El Tenebroso. A gleam lit in his eyes.

"Ah," he half sighed with relief, "you can put your trust in stepfathers, Mr. Ambassador; I'll send a young friend of mine."

"Who?"

"His name is Arnaldo—Adan Arnaldo."

The shots which had so astonished Dirk Van Suttart stirred Joyce Sewell to swift action. She rushed down into the patio, ascertained they had been fired from the two eastern towers, dispatched Luz to the northern one with a categorical order to lay off and hurried herself up the spiral stone steps of the bastion overlooking the southeastern gate. There she found Leonardo with head and shoulders thrust into an embrasure, looking out.

"We stopped a car in its tracks," he announced, "and it's almost a kilometer away!"

"That's fine, Leonardo," said Joyce, her face white, "but we'll have no more shooting until I say the word. Let me look, please."

Almost at once she discovered the distant car, a shining mark under the rays of the morning sun. It was a roadster and presently she saw emerge from its single seat a huge bear-like figure. Instantly Helm Blackadder came to mind, for who else could it be? Well, she was ready for him. What could he do besides talk? Let him come, and the sooner the better. The man stood for a moment as still as a pillar staring at his car, then he opened the rumble, dragged out a duffel bag and what looked like a gun, threw them over his shoulders and started to walk toward the hacienda.

He had gone less than a hundred yards when he came to the barranca and the rope bridge and he hastened his steps. At that juncture her attention was diverted to a cloud of dust moving across the prairie far to the east. She saw it had been caused by a troop of horsemen and the next instant she realized they had dismounted and were emitting strange puffs of smoke. What could they be shooting at? At her? She was about to draw back instinctively when she saw the bear-like figure leap into the air, come down on all fours and scurry for cover. Leonardo wedged himself into the embrasure next to hers.

"Dorado!" he yelled. "Dorado y su gente!"

Three Little Words

NEXT time you or yours want "something nice to wear," remember me and my three little words: Sew-Your-Own! Yes, Milady, sew-your-own because it pays big dividends. It's good for you! Instead of worrying about clothes you can't have, you'll be humming about all the pretty things you can have—and all because you sew, sew, Sew-Your-Own! Won't you join us today or very soon?

White House or Cottage.

Even if your home were the White House, Milady, you would need a little frock like today's 1413 to see you through your housekeeping chores. It has that style usually reserved for expensive frocks and its simplicity will fascinate you. A young collar tops its shirtwaist styling, while the trim short sleeves and shirred yoke are features to be appreciated every time you put it on. It will make you smart in crisp new gingham, and it's more than chic in silk crepe. Try it both ways—you'll like them!

So Simple, So Sweet.

Little Miss Two-to-Eight will use her very nicest three-syllable words to exclaim over this frock (above center) designed especially for her by Sew-Your-Own! It is one of those so-simple, so-sweet little affairs that every mother and every daughter has a weakness for. The new prints or criss-cross gingham will look more than appealing on your little "forty pounds of charm."

That Poured-in Look.

"Something nice to wear," in the full sense of the phrase, is the brand new frock at the right. Your teas and bridge will be dates to look forward to with this smart model in black satin or velvet, awaiting your call. Fashion says: "that poured-in look," and Sew-Your-Own said "when" just in the nick to make this your most figure-flattering frock. It is equally effective for the sub-deb and young executive. It belongs in every well-groomed lady's wardrobe. Why not in yours?

Pattern 1413 is designed for sizes 34 to 50. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 35 or 39-inch material. Pattern 1852 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6, and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2½ yards of 39-inch material plus 6 yards of ribbon for trimming, and 1 yard for belt.

Pattern 1383 is designed for sizes 14 to 20. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 54-inch material.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

We Admire the Chap Who Can Stand the Gaff

We hear of some individual who, in spite of misfortune and handicaps, has faced life with a song on his lips and who has continued the battle against disagreeable circumstances, and we profess great admiration for him; but when we are assailed with troubles, we are apt to make a great outcry about injustice. We cannot stand the gaff that hooks us for our own heedlessness.

There is some human injustice in the world, but not enough to occasion the getting out of an "Extra," with black headlines.

If we let the other lead the way and break trail, we must expect to get his dust.—Detroit News.

Age Limit of Earth Fixed at 3,000,000,000 Years by U. S. Chemistry and Soils Expert

Ever since it was discovered that the heat emitted by radio-active substances in the earth was sufficient in amount to have an important geological significance, efforts have been made to calculate the effect of these substances and to use them as a key to determining the age of the earth. The study of the effects of uranium and radium, the heaviest radio-active substance, gave ages of the earth ranging from 1,200,000,000 to 2,000,000,000 years. Dr. A. Keith Brewer, of the bureau of chemistry and soils, Department of Agriculture, has studied the effect of potassium, one of the lighter elements which is also radio-active, and has found that it has played an important role in the history of the earth.

The amount of radio-active potassium varied during the succession of periods of the earth's processes of change, and when the earth was 1,000,000,000 years old it produced sixty times the heat produced by the heavy radio-active elements uranium and thorium. Calculating the age of the earth on the basis of the potassium index, Dr. Brewer fixes the limit of the age of the earth at 3,000,000,000 years. This calculation is based on the amount of calcium of atomic weight 40 which exists today, because potassium of atomic weight 40 changes into that isotope of calcium. Dr. Brewer expresses the belief that the power of potassium, which is extensively used as a fertilizer, to promote germination of seeds and growth of plants is due to its radio-activity, and suggests that a period of abundance of the element may have been the cause of the carboniferous age, when the earth was covered with a lush growth of vegetation which became the coal deposits in use today.

Judge—What is the meaning of this expression "Sez you?"
Counsel—M'lud, it would appear that it is a slang phrase of American origin which has gained regrettable currency in the language of our people through the insidious agency of the cinema, and is, I am given to understand, employed to indicate a state of dubiety in the mind of the speaker as to the veracity of a statement made to him.

Missing Those of Today
Many of us are very busy looking for tomorrow's possibilities. A man's age commands veneration. A woman's commands tact. Sincerity writes the character of a man with indelible letters. A man believes in being warm in his winter clothes and a woman in looking svelte. Time is money only if you know how to turn it into money. Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Monee Man In Race For County
Supt. of Schools

WALTER GRANT SMITH

Mr. Walter Grant Smith has been the Superintendent of the Monee Grade and High school for the past six years. He has been in the school system of Will County for seventeen years. This is a longer period of service than that of any other principal or superintendent of a high school in the county. The four years previous to his coming to Will County, Mr. Smith was Principal of Martinton Township High School.

He has a degree in Education from the Illinois State Normal University—a teacher training University. He has completed a year's work with the University of Chicago. The major part of his education courses was in the field of Administration and Supervision of Rural and Village schools which particularly qualifies him for the office of County Superintendent of Schools. He holds an Illinois State Supervisory Certificate—granted by written examination by the Illinois State Examining Board, and not issued on college credits.

Mr. Smith's 28 years experience in Public school work includes 4 years of teaching in Rural schools and 24 years as Principal and Superintendent of Grade and High schools. All of his teaching has been done in Illinois.

He is Secretary of the Junior Six Athletic and Dramatic Association and was also President of the Association for two years. He is a past vice president of the Will County Principal and Superintendent's Association.

Mr. Smith is 46 years of age, married and has three children attending school.

He has always supported the Republican Party but has never been a candidate for public office.

Spiritual Devotional
Services In Homes
Urged By Dr. Maier

The disintegration of many American churches is throwing the responsibility of religious training back to the home, Dr. Walter A. Maier asserted today in his coast-to-coast Lutheran Hour broadcast. "We throw up our hands in horror," Dr. Maier said, "when we read of Herod's massacre of the Bethlehem children; yet far greater is the murder of American children. Each year a million and a half are killed before they are born and many millions of the nation's youth are murdered morally and spiritually through the avarice of commercialized sin, ignorance concerning the human soul and the destructive influence of their own parents."

"What good are high and stately churches if their messages are counteracted by irreligion and indifference in the home. The church-going population, including haphazard attendance, represents about one-half of the people of our country, who spend on the average less than one of the hundred and eight hours of each week in the church. The 'Mighty Revival' of which we are now hearing and reading must start within the home if it is to have the hope of widespread blessing."

Asserting that too often American fathers and mothers are preoccupied and unprepared to instruct their own children, Dr. Maier said they try to ease their conscience by transferring this duty to the teachers in the grammar schools and Sunday schools. He described the home as the line of last defense and recommended increased Bible reading and family prayer as the most effective means of strengthening individual and national morale.

"All Is Lost Save Honor" The expression "All is lost save honor," was first used by Francis the First of France after a military defeat.

Duty of Society to Man The duty of society is to aid man's growth, not to fetter him.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 2.

The Golden Text was, "Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary: who is so great a God as our God? (Psalms 77:13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else" (Isaiah 45:22).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The starting-point of divine Science is that God, Spirit, is All-in-all, and that there is no other might nor mind,—that God is Love, and therefore He is divine Principle. To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is, Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, combine as one,—and are the Scriptural names for God" (p. 275).

Gospel Message at 3:00 p. m.

Rev. S. E. Waldemer of Chicago Heights will bring the message.

Mr. and Mrs. Waldemer are laboring in this community without any salary. Their time is given here for one reason, they love the Lord Jesus Christ and love to work for Him.

If you haven't heard this minister, come out and hear him. He is a great worker for the Lord and he leads many lost souls to Jesus.

Election of officers has been postponed until Sunday, January 16th. Please come at that time and take part in the Lord's work in your community.

Attend some church Sunday.

MANY OF SWEDENBORG'S VIEWS ARE CURRENTLY ACCEPTED TODAY

Though 250 Years Have Passed Since His Birth, His Influence Still Pervades Religion and Psychology
—A Birthday Commemoration is Planned

THE 250th anniversary of the birth of Emanuel Swedenborg, statesman, scientist and theologian, falls on January 29, 1938. Various groups interested in his achievements are utilizing this event to remind the general public of his important contributions to many currently accepted views on religious and psychological subjects.

Among his works totalling 237, many treat of mining, metallurgy, physiology, mathematics, and psychology. The early part of his career was devoted to such subjects. At the age of 55 he began to write theological works, and produced in all 83 volumes of these before his death in 1772. He lived a life of prodigious intellectual activity.

The religion of Swedenborg's day was characterized by an artificiality which is difficult for people of today to understand. Swedenborg's contribution to theological thought by his insistence upon what is called "the doctrine of uses," is one which has in the last 200 years permeated all religious activity, and indeed affected mankind's thinking in many realms of knowledge.

The belief that faith and charity must be expressed in personal behavior was a new concept of religious thinking expounded by Swedenborg. His writings were affirmed by Swedenborg to be direct revelations to him of things seen and heard in the spiritual world to which his earthly senses were opened by divine providence. He disclosed that the scriptures were written according to the law of correspondences, through which all material things may be interpreted to have a spiritual meaning. Thus the inner sense of the Bible is divinely inspired. According to the law of correspondences, there are three degrees of being, corresponding to the three degrees of being in God. They are—the Celestial, those in the good of love; the Spiritual, those in the truth of wisdom; and the Natural, those in the good of use—thus, end, cause and effect, or soul, body, and the outgoing action. The Trinity in one God is, the Divine Love the Father, the Divine Wisdom the Son, and the Holy Spirit the Outflowing Life.

The old theory of predestination or redemption of the elect was replaced with another new concept. Man, he claimed, is an immortal spirit having a physical and spiritual body. The physical is discarded after death for the spiritual, which awakens to consciousness in the spiritual world. Then, according to his earthly life, man makes his home either in heaven or hell. Heaven is composed of many societies of angels, the whole composing "The Grand Man." This idea of the grand man may be compared to an image of physical man. As he consists in the whole of members, organs, and viscera, and in part of series of fibres, nerves and blood vessels, of members within members and parts within parts, nevertheless when he acts, he acts as one man. Everything in him contributes to the common good and performs its proper use—the whole to its parts and the parts to the whole. So the societies of heaven are connected as parts in the image of the Grand Man according to their capacity of performing uses. The division goes on further—each society and finally each angel is in the form of a man.

These are a few of the less widely known tenets of Swedenborg. His doctrine of life is almost universally accepted today: "All religion has relation to life and the life of religion is to do good."

The Swedenborg Foundation, New York City, will supply information without cost on various phases of Swedenborg's life and achievements.

NEW LENOX By Dolores Walsh

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stockley are the proud parents of a daughter born Wednesday, December 29th in Silver Cross hospital.

Mrs. Charles Reeser entertained the afternoon pinocle club at her home Thursday afternoon. Pinocle was in play at two tables and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Loretta Ridgeway, Mrs. Francis Tauber and Mrs. Henry Koerner. A traveling prize was also awarded to Mrs. Krohn who was a guest of the club. Refreshments were served at one long table, table in keeping with the holiday season decoration.

Miss Doris Urch of Mokena spent Thursday and Friday here with Miss Dolores Walsh.

New Year's Day guests in the Gust Osmus home were the Mr. and Mrs. Albert Osmus and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Osmus and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Osmus and family.

Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Walsh were: Mr. and Mrs. William Weber Jr. and Mrs. Emma Weber of Lockport, Miss Eleanor McGuire, Dewey Ruetiger, and Leonard Anderson, of Joliet, Beatrice and Dolores Walsh.

Members of the Catholic Youth Organization of St. Jude's Catholic church entertained at a Victory, and New Year's party on Thursday night, December 30th in the home of Mrs. Clara Schneider, West Country Club road.

Games and music were the evenings diversion. Prizes were awarded to Melvin Reiter, Lillian Carey, Bill Felak, Mrs. Cecilia Lemacher, Leona Eich, Webb Turill, Elizabeth Wilbes and Jack Madden.

Several musical selections were played by: Mrs. Cecilia Lemacher, piano; Richard Falletti, piano; Leo Wellner, mouth harp and guitar; Leo Kestel, banjo guitar.

Refreshments were served at midnite by Mrs. Schneider, assisted by Mrs. Ray Reiter. Those present were: Mrs. Cecilia Limacher, Elizabeth Welbes, Wilbert Terlep, Leo Wellner, Harold Loeffler, Ann Welbes, Bill Felak, Martina Mahoney, Frances Ochs, Jack Madden, Lester Mitchell, Marie Doll, Marjorie Stewart, and Rev. Father Roman of Joliet, Richard Falletti of Lincoln Estates, Leo Kestel of Manhattan, Eleanor McGuire, Bessie Latz, Lawrence Surges, Clementine Zitar, Doris Schneider, Harold, Robert, George and Melvin Reiter, Jack Lannen, Bette McIntyre, Albert and Leona Eich, Emily Cruise, Lillian Carey, Francis Berens and Dolores Walsh.

A Treasurer's report was given by Harold Reiter; vice president, Doris Schneider; financial secretary, Dolores Walsh; librarian, Bette McIntyre; and marshal, Jack Lannen.

An application for new memberships was brought in by Edward Janice.

The "debate" on "Capitol Punishment" between the girls and boys to have been held Monday night was postponed until Monday night, February 7th.

Plans were made for a Valentine Invitational Dance to be held on Wednesday evening, February 10th. The committee in charge were chosen as follows: Lillian Carey, Dolores Walsh, Jack Lannen, and Francis Berens.

Following the meeting airplane bunco was in play at four tables, prizes being awarded to Lillian Carey and Gordon Osmus. Other games were played and Miss Bette McIntyre was also awarded a prize. Luncheon was served at 11 o'clock at individual tables by the hostess and her mother, Mrs. Frank Reiter, assisted by Mrs. Block.

The group will meet at its next regular monthly meeting on Monday, February 14th, at the home of Miss Dolores Walsh.

Those present were the Misses: Eleanor McGuire, Doris Schneider, Lillian Carey, Emily Cruise, Bette McIntyre, Leona Eich, and Dolores Walsh. Also Frances Bruns, Robert, George, and Harold Reiter, Gordon Osmus, Edward Janice, Jack Lannen, Albert Eich, and Rev. Father Roman.

Don't forget the girls' and boys' basketball games every Tuesday night and Sunday afternoons.

Miss Lois Miller entertained the Twin Esthers organization at her home Wednesday. Miss Marjorie Schumh, president of the group, presided.

Ronald and Marlene Eberhardt, children of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Eberhardt, are ill at their home with scarlet fever.

AROUND THE TOWN

Several young folks would like to know why J. L. detests and refuses to ever go to a hospital, and what's this all about anyway, Jack! Did you say B. Mc. was the cause of your down fall?

"Diamond" or better-known now as "Twinklepuss" must have made up her mind in a hurry, to have been on her knees to Alb. E. and believe it or not he was tickled pink and accepted right away. So now it's "Twinkle" and "Albie." Shows to go ya' what a proposal will do now days.

"Mistletoe" is a great thing to have at a party. Yes, sir! Try it some time. We can't figure it out, whether it was A. E. or just weak knees that sent "her" to the floor in doorway. Yes, the mistletoe was just above the door.

Hands off the "banana man" that comes to town in his big truck, girls. He happens to be L. C.'s property.

Bette goes for Bob and George in a big way—and their being brothers makes it tuff going. Better make make up your mind, keed, 'cause you can't have both. Cleme and Shirley might have something to say to that.

E. Mc. simply loves throwing plates around O. K. as long as they are paper plates, but if otherwise—ouch! She was practicing the other nite—on paper plates, of course.

Who did you fall for, or which, D. W., when you got that bump on the knee and over the left eye. Monday nite Looke bad. No more parties and games for you.

What makes G. O. so awfully bashful?

Looks like L. E. was all thrills with her blind date last Sunday nite.

D. S. ought to feel proud. After having been chosen the prettiest girl. She is, isn't she boys? But she doesn't know it, nor does it bother her. Just a care-free, loving gal that H. R. is crazy about. Took it easy Harold, she likes you too.

What Do You Know About Health?

By FISHER BROWN and NAT FALK

Answers: 1. A 17th century Danish physician-priest who discovered the duct which goes from the salivary gland to the mouth. In the medical profession this is known as Stensen's duct.
2. Because of a superstitious belief that a string of crooked horseshoe nails hung around a child's neck will ward off illness and evil influences. Thinking people today know that the best way of preventing disease is to build up good bodily resistance. This can best be done by including plenty of milk, fruits, and vegetables in the diet and getting sufficient rest.
3. Patented in the United States in 1896, this device was supposed to produce dimples on the human body where they had never been before and also to hang onto those already existing. Intelligent people were quick to realize, of course, that it was valueless.

Bringing the News DOWN to SIZE

BIG NEWS STORIES often keep alive for weeks or months until readers are confused or overwhelmed by the mass of printed detail. Occasionally readers fail to grasp the true aspects of such a story when it comes to a head, because they missed the earlier developments. Typical news of this sort were the Hauptmann case before it came to trial; the Italo-Ethiopian fracas; Philippine independence and old-age security legislation.

WILLIAM C. UTLEY, whose syndicated articles appear regularly in this newspaper, analyzes each case of this kind. In a single story he presents all the facts that are essential to enable the reader to conclude for himself what the outcome should be. He covers sport as well as government, business as well as every-day life. You'll find his work anything but dull—it will often give you a chuckle.

Spring Soil and Cropping Aspects of Recent Drought

In previous issues we referred to long continued drouth that we have experienced and the extreme depth in the sub soil to which the accumulated deficiency of moisture has reached and the further fact that now in our immediate region the surface is sealed with a frost crust. Our thoughts turn to what may be possible effects of these unusual moisture conditions on our coming season's soil and cropping program.

As we have no positive means of forecasting weather and hence can not foretell precipitation that will follow the melting of the frost crust when the water can again penetrate the soil to restore our sub soil moisture, we therefore, can only at this time conjecture as to a few of the things that may occur which will have a bearing on our soil situation. As present moisture content in the soil is low, we know this will be reflected in a thinner or less solid frost crust.

As the moisture film or soil particles becomes thicker with lowering of temperature, hence, in the low temperatures of winter we have a greater upward soil capillary moisture movement to the surface. As this moisture contacts the frost crust the latter operates as a ceiling and if temperatures continue low enough this moisture congeals and adds to the thickness of the frozen soil zone or crust.

In this frozen crust we therefore, have those minerals that were brought upward in solution such as calcium, phosphorus and the nitrates in calcium nitrate form that were previously leached downward and the first thing to consider is how this frost crust may melt whether from the lower side from the radiation of heat from the unfrozen soil beneath (as winter temperatures recede) and which is the usual method of melting of our frost crusts in the spring of the year, or from the top. The method from the top, which is infrequent, is melting from the surface with continuous warm rains, such as occurred in March of 1933. Many will yet recall the tough and hard soil condition that followed in the spring of that year. One can appreciate that when this frost crust melts with successive warm rains from the top that soil water carrying all the beneficial minerals that were previously brought upward and remained a part of the frost crust are then taken downward by the gravitational downward movement of the rain water and therefore, away from our plowed zone of soil. Meanwhile, our surface is leached with additional rain removing calcium and the minerals and which is the process of making soil more acid. This condition is reflected in more difficult cultivation and a lesser crop.

Supposing, on the other hand, frost crust melts from below without leaching rains; in other words, the frost ceiling retreats toward the surface and as the resultant calcium and other mineral bearing water moves upward it comes into the surface or plowed zone where we have most of our black humus bearing soils. The calcium and other minerals then have a very beneficial effect on this surface soil to the extent of their quantity to overcome acidity, make soils more friable and the humus content of the soil absorbs such nitrates as may have been present. If the humus coating around the soil particle can grab and absorb this plant food that has been brought up from below in the winter upward soil moisture movement then we now appreciate how valuable these humus coatings are and the importance of knowing how we can replace humus as explained in previous articles in this column and the part that ample supplies of carbon phosphorus as well as nitrate in the soil have in humus development.

We will also recall from previous articles that with the long continued drouth we have quite an accumulation of soil nitrates near the soil surface and it will be much to our interest that the manner of going out of the frost crust in the spring will make possible the fixation of these materials in our plowed surface soil or root zone. The ideal weather that we would like to see occur in the spring would be a melting of the frost crust from below without leaching rains and followed with enough rainfall to afford some sub soil moisture storage and then rains continue through the summer as may be needed. We had such a spring as this in 1935 but the return of which may be too much to hope for at this early date. While we would all like to see moisture reservoir supply of the sub soil restored, yet to have sufficient rain to

Estate of Jay Gordon, deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed Executor of the Last Will and Testament of Jay Gordon, late of the Town of DuPage, in the County of Will and State of Illinois, deceased, hereby gives notice that he will appear before the Probate Court of Will County, at the Court House in Joliet, in February, 1938, on the first Monday in February next (being the seventh day of said month), at which time all persons having claims against said estate are notified and requested to attend for the purpose of having the same adjusted. accomplish this in one spring not only make it impossible to get our spring work done but would so leach the surface soils as to greatly lower this coming season's crop yield. Hence, the ideal to hope for is a reasonable amount of rain for this year's cropping and if rains are not heavy be prepared for some summer sub soil moisture deficiency in the event frequent rains do not occur during the summer. We can see it is impossible to have enough rainfall this spring to restore our sub soil moisture to a normal level without such rainfall preventing or delaying field cultivation and unduly leaching the surface soil in advance of the vegetative or growing of our usual crops. If we have continued leaching rains this spring the surface soil will be tight and hard and have a low moisture retention capacity.

It is impossible, too, to outline the many conditions that may accompany different periods of rainfall in the spring but we can acquire some understanding so that we can reason out and interpret the effect of the rains as they occur in the spring, and think out the soil changes that accompany and follow the soil moisture movements. If we do not have the ideal of good intermittent rains in the spring but have either too little so as to be short of moisture or too much rain to the extent of soil leaching, then it may be well to consider restricting the hill count of our corn planting. In any rainfall outcome a vigorous deep rooting, higher food gathering hybrid strain of corn will best meet the coming spring soil and moisture situation.

At The End of The Year

At the end of a year it is customary to look back over the road we have traveled and to look ahead in anticipation of even greater progress. We usually end a year with a feeling that we have accomplished much in solving the problems that faced us when the new year began. We usually begin each year with an assurance that it will be a happier and more prosperous one than just concluded. It is a time of rejoicing.

Such, unfortunately, does not seem to be the attitude and mood of today as our people greeted 1938. Underneath the surface one senses a feeling of discouragement rather than satisfaction with 1937. One senses that 1938 being welcomed by our people with a feeling of anxiety rather than assurance. There are hunger and weariness where there should be happiness and prosperity. Rather than unity and a spirit of friendly co-operation between organized groups, classes and the government there are disunity and hates.

Indeed it is today we should courageously face realities, recognize and boldly acknowledge the errors we have made. It is today that our leaders should draw up resolutions abounding their selfish policies fostering a constant economic and political warfare. Our hope for 1938 lives with the development of a new spirit of tolerance and co-operation. The new year may bring prosperity but it is idle to speak of it until there has been a change of attitude on the part of the Administration and on the part of various groups.

During the last session of Congress a "document" known as "The Address to The American People" was drawn up by several Republican and Democratic Senators. It is well worth the attention of every citizen as embodying a declaration of principles which points the way to economic recovery. This document could well be a New Year resolution which would bring real happiness and prosperity in 1938. It expresses the new spirit of tolerance, unity and cooperation so greatly needed. As expressing that spirit and need of today the opening paragraphs of the document are worth quoting here: "A sudden and extensive recession, industry, employment, prices, and values demands instant attention of all in positions of responsibility. To arrest it, to reverse it, and to avert its consequences is the common task. In this as Senators we have a duty, and in partial discharge of it we have determined upon this statement.

"We believe that a policy of co-operation by all concerned upon sound lines will suffice to set the country as a whole on its accustomed way toward higher ground. This co-operation is the object of this address to the American people. This is no time for alarm or pessimism. We have come to the inevitable period of transition, and fortunately the underlying conditions are favorable.

"We are concerned now only with our duty in view of the conditions that confront us, in order that full activity of employment and commerce may be had. To avoid controversy and make for unity, we may dispense with appraisals of policies and arguments. The past is experience and is of value only for its lessons. We propose no criticism, no politics."

That is the general spirit and tone of the document. It should constitute the resolution for 1938. Almost all of 1937 was spent in blaming each other and in a vain search for some magic formula. It is to be devoutly hoped that in 1938 the Administration will find a basis for co-operating with business and business with the Administration, that Republicans and Democrats will find a basis for co-operating in the common task, that all our people may look to the future with assurance of real prosperity and real happiness in a free country.

Man Creates His Own Company

Every man must live with the man he makes of himself, and the better job he does in molding his character, the better company he will have.

If You Want To Make The New Year Happy

If you would make the New Year happier, resolve to drive safely during 1938!

This again was the New Year's suggestion offered by Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes.

Expressing concern over reports which indicate a 1937 toll of dead and injured unparalleled in the history of the motor vehicle industry, he urged throughout the coming year, a united front on the part of motorists, enforcement officers and pedestrians in an aggressive campaign, to the end that our streets and highways again will be reasonably safe for travel.

"It is appalling to contemplate the new year's toll of tragedies due to automobile accidents," said Secretary Hughes. "The problem is one with which we can no longer afford to temporize."

"Only by accepting individually, the burden of the responsibility for the safety of ourselves and others and strict adherence to the traffic laws of our state and nation, can we hope to keep accidents at a minimum," Mr. Hughes told motorists.

"Public officials charged with traffic law enforcement must meet the issue squarely and impartially in the matter of law enforcement and co-operate to keep roadways in a safe traveling condition.

"Pedestrians also have their part to play in reducing future accidents. They should resolve to become traffic conscious, to co-operate with motorists and obey traffic laws," says Secretary Hughes.

When these factors are given satisfactory consideration, we will have reached the first approach to a fundamental solution of highway safety which will do much to contribute to a happier new year.

Swedenborg's Contribution to Physiology

By MAX NEUBERGER, M. D.

Professor of the History of Medicine, University of Vienna

Everybody that has even made a slight acquaintance with the two chief anatomical-physiological works of the Swedish Aristocrat knows that there is scarcely a chapter in them but surprises us with brilliant anticipations of modern science. Wherever we penetrate into the mine of Swedenborg's physiology we strike a vein of metal so rich that the united strenuous efforts of several savants will be needed to raise the whole of it.

FRANKFORT.

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

Mrs. Ernest Gierke was a patient in Silver Cross hospital suffering with an infected tooth.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bobzin was very ill after an operation for appendicitis.

A very pretty wedding took place on December 28th, 1937, at 5 p. m. in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stauffenberg of Manteno, when their daughter Leona, became the bride of Mr. Oley Contois.

The bride was attired in blue velvet and wore a gardenia corsage. Mrs. Lucille Stauffenberg served as her bridesmaid and was dressed in Roseberry crepe with a corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Lester Stauffenberg was best man, while Jarda-nella Black was ring bearer. The ceremony was made very beautiful by candle and Christmas tree lights.

A wedding dinner was served to the immediate families and the couple left for a short wedding trip but at present are at home to their friends in a new home at Montana. The bride was a primary teacher in the local school some years ago and all extend their best wishes to them.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

State Auditor Edward J. Barrett authorized the State Bank of Keosauqua to pay a 10 per cent dividend of $1,549 on waived deposits.

Wilbur A. Telford, seventy-four years old, an architect and contractor, died at his home in Galena. He was a Mason. He built many of the city's old homes.

Harry I. Battles, sixty-four years old, employed as freight agent for the Rock Island lines for more than 30 years, died in Peoria after a short illness.

A sentence of one year in the county jail for contempt of court imposed on Robert W. McKinlay of Chicago, federal court receiver, for an alleged bribe given a juror in the first embezzlement trial of Frank V. Zintak, was reversed by the Illinois Supreme court.

Dwight E. Hale, sixty years old, widely known poultry judge and agricultural authority, died at his home in Glen Ellyn. Mr. Hale was a breeder of Great Dane dogs and a lecturer on improved methods of poultry raising. He was a member of the American Poultry association and the Agricultural council of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

The public health department announced that sufficient toxoid to inoculate 158,708 children against diphtheria had been distributed the first 10 months of this year. Also distributed was sufficient smallpox vaccine for 334,565 vaccinations, typhoid vaccine for 89,832, anti-rabic vaccine for 6,891, silver nitrate for the eyes of 114,400 new-born babies and Shick test material for 198,290.

Mr. and Mrs. James Umstadt of Bloomington, who were married recently, planned to see Niagara falls on their honeymoon. But they won't make a trip anywhere. The bride, formerly Evelyn Switzer, slipped on the ice and fractured her right leg just above the ankle. The husband fell while putting up storm windows on the new home and broke his left leg.

The Illinois commerce commission approved, with certain exceptions, the new tariff schedule of the railroads calling for a 10 per cent boost in freight rates on selected commodities. The increase applies on shipments which originate and have their distribution within Illinois. A similar increase on interstate business of the railroads was granted by the interstate commerce commission recently.

Work was formally begun on a $257,000 project that will give Libertyville a new park and what will amount to a new lake. The first shovelful of dirt was turned up by Village President A. E. Suter in a ceremony attended by more than 400 persons, including Charles E. Miner, state WPA administrator. The park will surround Butler lake, described by President Suter as now little more than a marsh and a mosquito breeder. This lake will be eighty-three acres. Swimming facilities will be provided.

A program for improved protection at 181 railway crossings in Illinois during 1938 was outlined to representatives of forty-six railroads at a conference in the Illinois commerce commission offices. James M. Slatery, commission chairman, told the group the crossing accident rate in 1936 was greater than in 1935 and probably would show an increase for 1937. The commission program takes recognition of the financial conditions of the railroads and no prohibitive burdens will be placed on them, Slatery said.

Congressman Ralph E. Church of the tenth Illinois district announced the following appointments to West Point and Annapolis academies to fill vacancies by graduation next June: Walter W. Dillon, Round Lake; John Edward Roberts, Lake Bluff; and Terence J. Pryde, Evanston, have passed their competitive examinations as candidates and alternates for West Point. Norman K. Miller, Chicago; Roland D. Jackson, Chicago; Robert Gray Tower, Evanston; and Frank J. Reh, Chicago, have passed examinations for the naval academy.

The earth has again swallowed the "Big Sink," a 600-acre lake situated between Elizabethtown and Cave in Rock. The huge body of water disappeared over night—so fast residents of the vicinity said they could see it sinking. It left only the fish, which were scooped up and carried away in automobiles. Natives said the fish included catfish, buffalo and other varieties, some of them about three feet long. The lake disappears into the ground every few years and refills from drainage. The mystery has been unexplained officially, but it is believed it sucks into an underground channel and flows into the Ohio river, about a mile and a half away.

Theron Newell, nineteen years old, was fatally hurt and seven other persons received injuries in a fire in Charleston. Five stores were destroyed and 35 persons living on second floors of the buildings made homeless.

F. E. Marley, seventy-five years old, retired newspaper publisher of Batavia, died in the community hospital at Geneva, after falling and fracturing his hip. Mr. Marley, a native of North Carolina, founded the Batavia Herald in 1892 and was active in its management until his retirement in 1927.

BEDTIME STORY by Thornton W. Burgess

THE NEWS REACHES PETER RABBIT

IT ISN'T often that Peter Rabbit doesn't know what is going on in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows, but once in a great while it happens. That was the case the time that everybody was looking for the storehouse of Busy Bee so as to make a friend of Buster Bear, who is very fond of honey. It happens that Peter had been staying very close to the dear Old Briar Patch in the daytime, visiting the Green Forest only at night. Now, of course, no one looked for the storehouse of Busy Bee at night, and so Peter didn't know anything about it for some time. When he did hear about it, he was very much put out because he had not known about it before. Peter is one of those people who want to be the first to know what is going on.

Now, Peter was quite as much afraid of Buster Bear as were any of his friends. In fact, it was because of Buster that he had given up going to the Green Forest as much as he used to or would have liked to. So when he heard that everyone was looking for honey for Buster Bear, he was filled with a great wish that he, too, might hunt for the honey. He might, he just might, find it. And if he did, why he and Buster Bear would be friends as long as they lived, and that would be perfectly splendid. The more he thought about it as he sat in the dear Old Briar Patch the more splendid it seemed, and he began to wish that he could climb trees like Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, or else that he could fly. He thought flying would be even better.

But he couldn't do either, and so couldn't quite see how he had the least chance in the world to find the honey which would make Buster Bear his friend. He sat in the dear Old Briar Patch and thought and thought. Jimmy Skunk came along and noticed that Peter was studying over something.

"Hello!" he exclaimed. "Got something on your mind, Peter Rabbit?"

Now, Peter didn't like to admit that he wished he could find the honey of Busy Bee, so he pretended not to hear Jimmy's question. "Hello, Jimmy Skunk!" he exclaimed, as if he had just discovered Jimmy's presence. "How are you?"

"Fine," replied Jimmy. "I'm glad to see that you haven't gone crazy like everybody else."

"What do you mean?" asked Peter.

"Why, everybody in the Green Forest is running around with their heads tipped back until they look as if they certainly would break their necks. They're all looking for honey, and to see them you would think that they expected it was going to drop right down on their noses. I never did see such foolishness, and all just to try to please Buster Bear. Some day one of them will walk right into his clutches, for you can't look up and watch where you are going at the same time. If I wanted to find that honey I wouldn't go about breaking my neck to do it. No, sir, not much!" "What would you do?" asked Peter so eagerly that Jimmy looked at him sharply.

"I'd ask some one who knows, or else I'd watch Busy Bee and find out where she goes to," replied Jimmy.

Peter didn't say anything more, but he did a great deal of thinking, and he did wish that Jimmy Skunk would hurry away. You see, he had thought of a plan. He had thought of some one, a friend of his, who ought to know all about Busy Bee and her honey, and he was anxious to go hunt him up. So for once Peter didn't want to talk, and after a little Jimmy Skunk went on his way to hunt for fat beetles.

SUNLIGHT AS A HEALTH FACTOR

It Comes in Food in Form of Vitamin D.

By EDITH M. BARBER

"A PLACE in the sun" has from time immemorial been a phrase used to describe a man's ambitions. The value of sunlight as a health factor has been recognized since the beginning of time. It is only recently, however, that we have known what particular quality of sunlight is most valuable as a health factor.

The action of the violet rays upon the skin has been found to supply a property which allows the body to utilize the phosphorus and calcium in such a way that strong bones are produced. In life as it is lived today it is difficult for us to get enough direct sunlight for this purpose, even when it is supplemented by foods which supply the same quality which we know as vitamin D. Among the foods which we use daily we find small amounts in egg yolks and in cream and butter. Fish oils, however, supply vitamin D in liberal quantities.

Science has made it possible for us to get a supply of vitamin D from foods which naturally contain little of it; we can now buy milk which has been "irradiated" by artificial violet rays by feeding the cows irradiated yeast or by adding a concentrated form of cod liver oil. Several cereals and a number of other foods which have been treated with vitamin D are also available.

Natural vitamin D has been isolated by Dr. Nicholas A. Milas of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In the laboratories of this institution a concentrate which has a far greater potency than any other form of vitamin D has been produced.

TESTED RECIPES.

Boston Baked Beans.

1 quart pea beans.
¾ pound fat salt pork
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup molasses
½ teaspoon mustard
Boiling water
Pick over beans, cover with cold

Maine Lobster Stew.

1 lobster, medium size (1½ pounds)
4 tablespoons butter
1½ quarts milk
1½ teaspoons salt
1½ teaspoons pepper

Chop the meat of the lobster very fine. Mash liver and coral together and add half of the salt and pepper. Place butter in sauce pan, add lobster, liver and coral and allow to simmer for a short time, but do not allow the butter to brown. Keep all the tail bones of lobster and add to milk and scald. Strain and pour on the lobster; add remaining seasoning. Bring back to the boiling point and serve in large soup bowls.

Corned Beef Hash.

2 cups chopped corned beef
2 cups chopped boiled potatoes
1 tablespoon minced onion
Salt, pepper
Milk, if desired
2 tablespoons fat

Mix beef, potatoes with onion and seasonings and add a little milk if a moist hash is desired. Melt the fat in a heavy frying pan, add the meat mixture and stir until thoroughly mixed. Press the mixture down in the pan until it holds together and cook over a low fire until brown underneath.

Eggs Benedict.

3 English muffins
6 slices frizzled ham
6 poached eggs
Hollandaise sauce

Split the English muffins and toast. Arrange the slices of ham on each muffin half. The ham should be fried lightly (frizzled) in a hot frying pan. Arrange poached eggs on ham and pour over the hollandaise sauce.

Sabayon Sauce.

1½ cups sugar
½ cup water
4 egg yolks
2 tablespoons herry

Combine one cup of the sugar with the water and stir over a low heat until the sugar is dissolved; boil three minutes. In the top of the double boiler put the egg yolks, stir in the remaining sugar and beat until foamy. Beat in the sugar syrup gradually and cook over hot water until the mixture thickens. Add the sherry and serve.

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

By JEAN
© By The Associated Newspapers

A GIRL who brings her toes out for the summer and sits around tennis courts or on lawns should be prepared to meet with a few difficulties. In the first place, there are always little boys and girls thoughtlessly running after balls and playing tag around your chair. Your toes are very likely to be used as a home plate. When they are you should smile (if wanly) and learn to sit on your feet. Let the kids have your handkerchief for a base.

In the second place, the young men who mill around you can't all be expected to be so agile as to avoid your toes all summer long. When one of them does do a good heel and toe act with you, you should try to be fairly pleasant about it after the first "ouch." If you make too big a fuss you'll probably plant a horrible complex in the boy which will last the rest of his life. For, you see, there's absolutely nothing he can do about a toe he's stepped on, which leaves him pretty frustrated. He can't offer to send it to the cleaners, nor can he bring roses to your bedside over it. So you might as well accept his apology and be done with it.

But apologize he must. And this paragraph we direct to all masculine steppers on toes. Never, for heaven's sake, make your apology sound as though you blame the girl. Remember, she didn't stick her foot out too far, nor is her foot too big. It was all your fault. You were awkward, your heel slipped, your foot is an outsize. Convey that apology and you'll be a Romeo for life.

How Word Honeymoon Originated

Among the northern nations of Europe, in ancient times, it was the custom for newly married couples to drink methylin or mead (a kind of wine made from honey) for thirty days after marriage. Antiquarians say that from this custom the term "honeymoon," or "honeymoon" originated. Whether or not that is its origin, it is known that in the days of marriage by capture the bridegroom remained in hiding with his bride until her kinsmen tired of the search for her. Later, when love entered marriage and elopements were frequent, the bride and bridegroom remained in hiding for a while. Both of these "hiding periods" seem to point to possible origins of the honeymoon trip

All-Purpose Gloves Crocheted Lengthwise

Nimble fingers are busily crocheting these lovely woolly gloves that so closely follows the vogue. They're quick to do—two flat identical pieces whipped together—with a gusset for that wrist flare. Use either yarn or string for endless durability. Just wait till you see how easy they are to do! In pattern 5676 you will find directions for making these gloves; an illustration of them and of all stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

Please write your name, address and pattern number plainly.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—His name will mean little to anyone except the rather wide circle of friends and business associates who admire his courage and thrift. Since there are hundreds of thousands like him in this country, I will identify him by his nickname—"Swarty." I have known him some ten or eleven years as a friend and a neighbor, a fellow who could be properly called the salt of the earth. Swarty's story is most interesting because it illustrates a condition.

He was the son of a country doctor. In his early twenties, he became a traveling salesman. His personality and his ability carried above the ranks of the average order-taker. He saved his money. He and his wife inherited a few thousand dollars each from their respective fathers. Swarty went into business for himself here in Washington. The business prospered to the extent that Swarty had built up a backlog of savings as a reserve and had bought his own home, a modest place. They are a happy little family and in that as well they are like hundreds of thousands of others in this country.

There came the depression of seven years ago. Sales by Swarty's little plant declined. He kept his ten employees on the rolls, however, as long as he could. The drain became too much and he had to reduce the payroll; indeed, he had to draw on the backlog. After nearly five years, things began to pick up. He started again to restore the reserve so that there could be something on which to draw again if business was slack. But almost simultaneously, Swarty found a lot of new taxes coming in the front door. One of them was the ridiculous levy that said in effect that he could not build up that backlog again because if he did he would have to share the excess with the federal government.

There had been some other taxes before that one, but it was the most disastrous in its effect. There were other taxes after the surplus earnings tax, too, until lately he told me that he was paying nine different taxes each month, and each year he has to pay an income tax on the salary that he allows himself for managing the business and, besides all of these, he has the strictly local taxes of the District of Columbia. Among these, of course, is a tax on the little home that he owns; a business privilege tax which assesses him a certain percentage of his total receipts; a license tax for the privilege of doing business; a tax on his motor cars which he uses in his business, a tax on the gasoline which powers the cars, and a few other odds and ends.

I made no mention in the above paragraph that he, like you and I, pays several hundred taxes that are not called taxes. He smokes cigarettes, for example, and the federal tax is six cents a pack. (Many states have a state tax in addition.) He bought his wife a piece of jewelry for Christmas, and there were three different federal taxes hidden in the price he paid.

I could go on and on with a revelation of the taxes, but I mention them only incidentally. The taxes that I am concerned with in this story of his affairs are the taxes directly on his business. They are important for the reason that he told me the other night that if it were not for all of these taxes, he could re-employ several men whom he had to discharge when the business was at its lowest. He can not hire them now, however, because the margin of profit available to him is small. He has to accomplish as much with six men as he used to with eight or nine or ten in order to make a living out of the business for himself and his family.

Swarty recounted the details of his own business to me about the time that the great Westinghouse corporation of Pittsburgh made public its tax story. In substance and in brief, Westinghouse pointed out that its tax obligations had increased from around two million dollars eight years ago to something over sixteen million dollars in federal payments in the last year. In the years 1935, 1936 and 1937, the taxes paid by Westinghouse were held to have been sufficient to have maintained about 6,500 additional workers on the payroll.

I know that someone will retort that a great corporation like Westinghouse ought to pay big taxes. There can be no doubting the truth of that assertion. But there is a much graver condition shown by exposition of the tax affairs of the big business of Westinghouse and Swarty's little business.

The only difference between the problems of the two is that Swarty, being a "little fellow," is not slapped and cuffed and called crooked by the demagogues. Swarty's government is doing to him, however, exactly what is being done to Westinghouse by the same authority.

Thus, I believe it is fair to conclude that these two cases illustrate beyond possible refutation how government has become topheavy, how its machinery has grown to a point almost beyond comprehension. These two cases, among tens and tens of thousands, show what the ship of state is costing. Indeed, I feel more and more that if we have a ship of state, it is leaking so badly that half of the taxes collected flow into the ocean of ineffectiveness and economic waste. The condition obtains from the smallest unit of township administration to the doors of congress and the White House in Washington.

We are into a new session of congress this week, the regular annual session. The extra session that met November 15 amid a great deal of ballyhoo as to what it would accomplish has gone into history. It left a record of which no one can be proud. But that's gone by and the new session is starting with a fine field waiting for cultivation—except that 435 members of the house and some 30-odd senators face primaries and elections. That fact alone provides the answer to many things you will see unfolded in the next four or five or six months. The boys will play politics aplenty.

But before we go into that, let us examine the little game of politics which President Roosevelt has initiated. I think it cannot be gained that the President has tossed a very hot potato into the lap of congress. Some time ago, it will be recalled, the President said with emphasis that the budget must be balanced this year—that spending of government money must not exceed the income as it has done now consistently for seven years. There was much applause of that pronouncement at the capitol. It seems, however, they are laughing out of the other side of their mouth now because suddenly the politicians discovered that if the budget were brought into balance, great gobs of political pap, patronage and projects would have to be eliminated.

There was a reaction to the President's statement. Mr. Roosevelt very promptly said, in effect, "Well, boys, if we cut down spending we have to start somewhere. How about cutting off a couple of hundred millions from the federal contribution for road building," and a howl went up to the skies. Quit building roads, never! So the President tried again. Later, he has sent a letter to Representative Cartwright, Oklahoma Democrat, saying that if Mr. Cartwright did not want his committee to act on the road fund curtailment, congress and its individual members would have to take the responsibility when the budget shows up out of balance.

I suppose there could be a slowing down in road building, but members of the house tell me there are hundreds of other places where spending could be reduced without harming a permanent national policy. There will be much hauling and filling but if congress really wants to curb spending, let it give a few minutes look at the things discovered by Senator Harry Byrd, the Virginia Democrat, and his investigating committee. That committee brought forth information, I am informed, as to how half a billion dollars of New Deal experiments could be eliminated and our United States would never miss a single one of them. (I do not mean the patronage boys on the payrolls. Of course, they would miss their soft jobs.)

To get back to the hot potato, however, the President has told congress in effect to sort out the things it would kill and pass the legislation that would eliminate the spending and bring a balanced budget. By so doing, he has dodged all of the backlash from local politicians of his own machine and has made the representatives and senators the goats in front of their own people.

I must not fail to report to you about the plight of the citizens of Greenbelt, that model community erected by the distinguished remoulder of men, Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, where cheap rents were to prevail and economic royalists dare not tread. For $14,000,000, Professor Tugwell built apartments for 185 families, provided no family had more than two babies. The government is going to get its money back in 232 years.

But a great blight has fallen over Greenbelt. The tenants did not read the fine print of their leases. Too late, they learned that the fine print prohibited them from having dogs, or any kind of pets. I understand there has been a bit of boot-legging of pets but anyway there is a prohibition against such things. Now, however, a great movement is under way in Greenbelt. Petitions are in circulation demanding that Landlord Uncle Sam change the lease. One never knows where such things will lead.

Lesson for January 9

PREPARING FOR A LIFE OF SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare ye the way of the Lord.—Mark 1:3.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Was Baptized.
JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Was Baptized.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Getting Ready to Serve.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Dedicating Our Lives to Service.

"The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ"—what an interesting expression! Did it not begin back before the foundation of the world? Yes, for the death of Christ was no mere afterthought in God's plan. But now we have the coming into the world of the One who was the Lamb slain from before the world's founding. Jesus Christ is about to appear to begin his ministry which was to culminate at Calvary's cross.

Before Jesus, comes the one sent to proclaim his appearing, to herald the coming of the Servant of God. Mark begins his account with the ministry of John the Baptist and makes no reference to the birth and genealogy of Jesus. How appropriate that is, for after all the important thing about a servant is not that he came from a certain family, or was born in a particular place. The point is that he is here now and able and ready to do his work.

I. The Herald of Christ (vv. 1-13).

The prophets had pointed forward to the coming of Christ. John the Baptist, of whom our Lord said that there was not a greater among the prophets, now appears to proclaim his presence and prepare the way for him. Of him Joseph Parker beautifully says that he "was all but a transparent veil: they could almost see the coming God through him. . . . If he stood aside for a moment there was the One who was to come."

John was a unique personality, admirably fitted to proclaim a stern message of repentance to a decadent age. Let us not put aside or ridicule strangely clad and unusual folk who have a word for us from God.

"Repent"—that was his message from the Lord. America needs that message today. The Christian doctrine of repentance has been set aside by some because they dislike its convicting power, and by others through theological readjustment. It needs re-affirmation.

John's greatest message, however, was the coming of the One who was to baptize not with water but with the Holy Ghost. Like every true witness he humbles himself and points to the Saviour. We need the message, "repent," but we need even more to recall to our preaching and our churches the Holy Ghost power of the Son of God.

II. The Baptism of Christ (vv. 9-11).

The account in Mark is brief but it brings before us the fact that the sinless Son of God thus identified his holy self with sinful humanity which he had come to save.

Let us learn the lesson that obedience to the divine will, a willingness to humble ourselves to do the work whereunto God has sent us, are prerequisites to the filling of the Holy Spirit with power and grace for life and service.

III. The Temptation of Christ (vv. 12, 13).

We recall as we consider the temptation of Jesus, that he was without sin, that there was no fallen nature in him to which Satan could appeal. The temptation or testing of Jesus was therefore along Messianic lines, but the principles both of temptation and victory are similar to those of our own experience. Consider the parallel passages in Matthew 4 and Luke 4.

The Devil has only three real temptations to present, "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life" (I John 2:16). These he used with Jesus as he tempted him to make food for his hungry body, to look at the kingdoms of this earth and attain them by a wrong method, and to presume on God's grace by throwing himself from the pinnacle of the temple.

Victory came through the use of God's Word. We need to learn that lesson and not attempt to defeat Satan with any man-made weapons of will-power, logic, or culture. Jesus was certain of victory. He is our victory. Learn to know him as Saviour and Lord. Study God's Word and learn how to use it in spiritual conflict. Yield to the Holy Spirit. Victory lies that way, and nowhere else.

The Countenance

The countenance may be defined as the title-page which heralds the contents of the human volume, but like other title-pages, it sometimes puzzles, often misleads, and often says nothing to the purpose.—W. Matthews.

Historic Hoaxes

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
© Western Newspaper Union.

The Indian Stone Hoax

IN 1838, workmen, digging in the Grave Creek mound, a 70-foot earthen cone in Moundsville, W. Va., discovered several human skeletons and a number of relics of these prehistoric mound builders who had used the mound as a gigantic tomb. They also discovered a scrap of sandstone, less than two inches long, covered with some strange symbols.

Scientists tried in vain to decipher their meaning. A Frenchman declared that it was a Canaanite inscription. Another Frenchman said its translation was "The Chief of Emigration who reached these places has fixed these statues forever." One scholar declared that four of the characters were ancient Greek, four Etruscan, five Runic, six ancient Gaelic; seven old Erse; 10 Phoenician; 14 old British and 16 Celtic.

For nearly a century the true meaning of the "Indian stone" baffled the scientists. And then a West Virginia printer and publisher solved the mystery. His name was Andrew Price and as a printer who handled much handwritten copy in the old "handset" days, he was accustomed to deciphering badly written manuscript. He began studying the "Indian stone" in 1930 and announced that its translation was this: "Bill Stump's Stone Oct. 14, 1838."

Some practical joker, who had read about the hoax played on Mr. Pickwick in Charles Dickens' "Pickwick Papers" (it was a mysterious tablet with an inscription that turned out to be "Bill Stumps, his mark"), had just imitated an inscription similar to Mr. Pickwick's discovery and "planted" it in an Indian mound. By doing so he baffled the scientists for nearly a century.

Private A. W. O. L.

STATE legislatures are noted for passing "goofy" laws but, considering the haste with which some measures are jammed through during the closing hours of a session, the wonder is that more such laws don't get on the statute books. One bit of legislation which caused a gale of laughter to sweep across the nation occurred only two or three years ago in Rhode Island.

It seems that "Little Rhody" had never given proper recognition to the World war services of one of her native sons—a certain Private Evaluel W. Tnesba of the Twelfth machine gun company. So when a bill appropriating $100 as a bonus for him was introduced in the senate, there seemed little doubt that the statesmen in the upper house, anxious to show their gratitude to Private Tnesba, would pass the bill.

Just in the nick of time somebody, who was struck by the fact that this was a most unusual name, dropped a suggestion that the senators try spelling the name backwards to "see what they got." They got a shock, for this warrior's name, when reversed, spelled "Absent W. O. Leave." Then it dawned upon them that they had been hoaxed. But they had also been saved from bestowing the taxpayers' hard-earned money upon a veteran who was not only non-existent but who was A. W. O. L. besides!

California Earthquake

WHEN an earthquake almost destroyed Long Beach, Calif., in 1933 several incidents of the "believe it or not" type were printed in newspapers all over the country as real occurrences. One of them was the story of the hen that was so frightened by the tremor that she laid seven eggs in quick succession. Another was about the mouse that was disgorged alive by the snake that had swallowed it.

But the prize story was that of the barber who stopped shaving a customer at the first shock of the 'quake, dashed to the railroad station and took the first train back to his home in Nashville, Tenn. He arrived there safely but had scarcely left the station when a tornado struck the Tennessee capital. Looking at the destruction about him, the barber immediately rushed to the telegraph office and wired to his old boss: "California's safer than this and I'll be back on the first train."

Except for the fact that there wasn't any tornado in Nashville, the story was a good one, although some people suspected that it was the invention of a "native son" still boosting for California. It was. The author of all these yarns was an imaginative reporter who thought it was up to him to throw a little humor into an otherwise desolate situation and therefore concocted all these yarns.

A Forest of Crosses

Lithuania is virtually a forest of votive crosses, as nearly every family has one or two of these ornately carved symbols of Christianity, which usually range from 15 to 20 feet in height, says Collier's Weekly. The boast that they are all radically different in design was confirmed recently by a man who photographed 3,000 of them and found no two alike.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Making a Chintz Bed Spread With Corded Seams.

WOULD you like to make a chintz bedspread to match your curtains? Of course, such a spread must have seams in it, for most chintzes are only 36 inches wide, while the average double bed is about 54 inches wide. But seams need not detract from the beauty of the spread.

Eleven and a half yards of 36-inch-wide chintz will make this spread and pillow cover for a double bed. In the diagrams at the right I have given the dimensions for cutting these for a 54-inch-wide bed. It is best to cut the center portions first; then cut the 18-inch side sections for the pillow cover; then the 10-inch strips for pillow cover and spread. This leaves a long 26-inch-wide strip for the side ruffles of the spread.

Cable cord for the corded seams may be purchased at notion counters. Prepared bias trimming may be used for the cord covering. Baste the covering over the cord.

Treat Colds This PROVED Way

WHY experiment? Vicks VapoRub has been doubly proved for you . . . proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind; further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (See full details in each VapoRub package.)

Only Vicks give you such proof.

VapoRub is the direct external treatment. No "dosing"—no risk of stomach upset.

Simply massage it on the throat, chest, and back (as illustrated).

Relief starts almost at once. You begin to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub starts working direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time, its medicated vapors—released by the warmth of the body—are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break local congestion.

Repeat treatment at bedtime. After restful sleep comes, VapoRub keeps right on working, hour after hour. Often, by morning, the worst of the cold is over.

A $13,000,000,000 Tax Bill

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

A recently published forecast of the 1938 tax bill now piling up for the American people to pay, sets the total at more than $13,000,000,000.

That estimate, the forecast continues, is 35 per cent higher than in 1936, 30 per cent higher than in 1930, and 60 per cent higher than in 1921.

It will be collected through many agencies, Federal, State and local, but always from the same source—the public.

It represents 20 per cent of our anticipated national income. In other words, it will take one dollar out of every five earned collectively by the American people.

That is the heavy load on American enterprise and American earnings that extravagance in government—whether Federal, State or local—inevitably entails.

Announced with the opening of the New Year, the estimate introduces a discouraging note. It comes at a time when America has expressed its determination to spare no effort which would check recession and forward the progress of a healthy recovery.

But recovery cannot be attained by loading both labor and enterprise with heavy and disproportionate costs of government.

It can be aided by lightening that burden and by encouraging both labor and enterprise to progress. Promise of relief from unreasonable taxation would be one of the most constructive steps that any Congress or any State Legislature could take.

Many public men realize this truism, as recent developments at Washington and throughout the country have indicated. To them, the public should give encouragement.

And to legislators who fail to realize it—whether at Washington or in State Capitals—is due a reminder that every dollar of wasted public money is a dollar out of some constituent's earnings.

Money raised by taxes is the people's money—and to demand that it be handled without waste is the people's right.
